MT SUMMERS FIELD TRIP

We (Rondi and I) started out nice and early for our meeting in Rakia with Geoff and Doris only to run into a road block at the back of the airport...our designated short cut... so we turned around and found our way out of the city another way only to be confronted with a heavy dose of fog. (The fog stayed with us until we ran into a few burn-offs in the back country.)

After a good hot cup of coffee we took off from Rakia into the back country to Mt Summers taking the odd photos along the way. Due to the conditions we had there were some interesting shots to get and a few we spider webs.

At Mt Summers we experimented with slowing the racing water in the river and taking photos of all things small like fungi and bees etc. After a bite to eat Geoff and myself walked a fair way up the track to a lookout but turned back as things got a bit slippery after the rain. It was lovely to be out in the bush for a change.

On the way home we stopped at a historical hut/house that purported to have housed a rather large family and all manner of animals. Interesting little place that gave us an opportunity to get some round shots, square shots, triangle shots and even the odd climbing shot. By which time we found the day had got away on us and it was time to return home. The surprises never stopped even then as we managed to get some sunset shots and yes a full moon that insisted on peering through power lines. Learned the valuable lesson of never to chase a full moon... it just keeps hiding ... better to keep on until a clear spot shows on the road.

I must say... it was a great day out and those that missed it missed some very interesting and fun times. My thanks to Geoff and Doris for their guidance and Rondi for giving me a lift. That was a day to remember.
